An Institute that Broadens your Perspectives

The University Institute of Technology of Paris (IUT), a public and selective institution, is a component of Paris Descartes University. Since March 2019, Paris Descartes University, Paris Diderot University and IPGP have merged to give birth to the University of Paris. The University of Paris is thus the leading university in France.

The University Institute of Technology offers training in small groups of students, attentive supervision, and teaching methods combining theory and practice.

These training courses are divided into 6 professional areas:

- Social work
- Business and administration

- Information & Communication
- Computer science
- Statistics & Business Intelligence
- Sales and Marketing.

Training is provided by teachers and professionals and includes internships and course projects. The Paris University Institute of Technology is a renowned 50-year-old institution with powerful networks of partners and alumni offering many opportunities for internships, as well as applied courses.

The IUT delivers a two-year national university degree called a DUT, which is recognised throughout the professional world, as well as vocational Bachelor's degrees.
